What is Provisional Patent or Non-Provisional Patent?

- An invention can be patented in many ways, including registering a provisional patent or filing a non-provisional patent.
- A provisional patent is applied for before filing the regular application- it offers faster processing time at the USPTO and grants an earlier date for obtaining financial rewards through marketing the products/services covered by the provisional patent application.
- Filing a non-provisional application first grants you priority over other applicants who file new designs/inventions later.
- This way you can save time waiting in line at the USPTO while your regular application is processed through the legal system.
