

Marcuss, Zara Author Article for 'Santa Clara Journal of International Law'

April 12, 2016

DC Senior Counsel Stan Marcuss and Santa Monica Attorney Michael Zara authored an article in the spring issue of the Santa Clara Journal of International Law that proposes a radical reform of the current export control system by giving the private sector responsibility for determining which goods or technologies pose a threat to national security. Government involvement would only be needed when the private sector is unwilling to accept that responsibility. The authors contend that their proposal, if adopted, would make compliance with export controls much simpler and enhance the ability of the U.S. export control system to achieve its objectives. DC Associate Lloyd Grove assisted with the article. Click here to read their article, "A Better Way Through the Export Control Thicket."

Authors/Presenters

Stanley J. Marcuss

Co-Author

Senior Counsel
Washington, DC
sjmarcuss@bryancave.com

Michael B. Zara

Co-Author

Attorney
Santa Monica, California
mbzara@bryancave.com